

BIOSITE PROJECT

Subject: Russell L. White

Career Postman · Bassist · Storyteller

Design Concept: Dark Rustic · Music-Inspired

Table of Contents

1. Front-End Style Guide
2. Selected Color Palette
3. Wireframes & Site Structure
4. Subject Interview (10+ Q&A)
5. Subject Biography (250+ words)
6. Image Plan & Descriptions

1. Front-End Style Guide

This style guide establishes the visual language for the bioSite dedicated to Russel L White. The aesthetic draws from dark rustic textures, warm amber tones, and the raw energy of live music evoking roadhouse stages, aged wood, and the weight of a bass guitar line.

Design Philosophy

Russell's site should feel lived-in and authentic. The design borrows from concert posters, vintage album art, and the warmth of a rehearsal room lit by a single bulb. Every visual decision should reinforce the sense that this is a man with a story to tell. My biggest thing with this site is that I want it to be as close to a final example of who my dad is and what he does.

Typography

Primary Typeface Headings

Font: Georgia (serif)

Usage: Page titles, section headers, pull quotes

Character: Authoritative yet warm; echoes vintage broadsheet typography

Secondary Typeface Body

Font: Arial / system sans-serif

Usage: Body copy, captions, navigation links

Character: Clean and legible; provides contrast against decorative headers

Accent / Display

Font: Georgia Italic

Usage: Subheadings, pull quotes, interview responses

Character: Adds personality without competing with heading hierarchy

Type Scale

Element	Size	Weight / Style
H1 Page Title	42px	Georgia Bold
H2 Section Header	28px	Georgia Bold
H3 Subsection	20px	Georgia Italic
Body Copy	16px	Arial Regular
Caption / Label	13px	Arial Regular, Letter-spaced
Navigation	14px	Arial Bold, All-Caps

UI Components

Navigation Bar

Background: Deep Charcoal (#1A1A1A)

Links: Parchment (#F5F0E8), uppercase, letter-spaced 0.1em

Active/Hover state: Rustic Amber (#C9972A) underline

Position: Fixed top; includes site wordmark left-aligned

I want this to have a dropdown system similar to my existing pages in this class

Buttons

Primary Button: Rust Red (#8B3A1E) background, Parchment text, subtle drop shadow

Secondary Button: Transparent, Rust Red border, Rust Red text

Hover state: Slight lightening of background color, cursor pointer

Border radius: 2px (minimal rounding aligns with rustic aesthetic)

Cards / Content Blocks

Background: Aged Charcoal (#2E2E2E)

Border-left accent: 4px solid Rustic Amber (#C9972A)

Body text: Parchment (#F5F0E8) at 0.9 opacity

Hover: Slight vertical lift via box-shadow

Images

All images use a subtle warm sepia overlay (CSS filter: sepia(20%) contrast(105%))

To give it the rusty russell look HAHA

Portrait image: circular crop on About page

Gallery images: consistent 3:2 aspect ratio

Captions: italic, small-caps, Rustic Amber color

Dividers / Decorative Elements

Section dividers: thin single-rule line in Rustic Amber

Musical note or guitar pick SVG accents at section breaks (optional)

Texture overlay on hero sections: subtle grain/noise at 5-8% opacity

Links

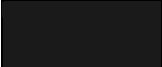

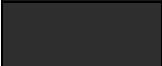

Default: Rustic Amber (#C9972A), no underline

Hover: Parchment (#F5F0E8), underline appears

Visited: Desaturated amber (#A07830)

2. Selected Color Palette

The palette is rooted in dark, earthy tones that evoke weathered wood, warm stage lighting, and aged concert memorabilia. It is designed to feel masculine, timeless, and deeply tied to the mood of blues and rock music.

Swatch	Name	Hex Code	Usage
	Deep Charcoal	#1A1A1A	Primary background, navigation bar
	Aged Charcoal	#2E2E2E	Card backgrounds, secondary surfaces
	Rust Red	#8B3A1E	Primary accent, buttons, H1 text
	Rustic Amber	#C9972A	Secondary accent, links, hover states, H2 text
	Parchment	#F5F0E8	Body text, light backgrounds
	Worn Slate	#4A5568	Muted text, borders, secondary elements
	White	#FFFFFF	High-emphasis text, icons on dark backgrounds

Color Accessibility Notes

Parchment (#F5F0E8) on Deep Charcoal (#1A1A1A):

Rustic Amber (#C9972A) on Deep Charcoal (#1A1A1A):

White (#FFFFFF) on Rust Red (#8B3A1E):

3. Wireframes & Site Structure

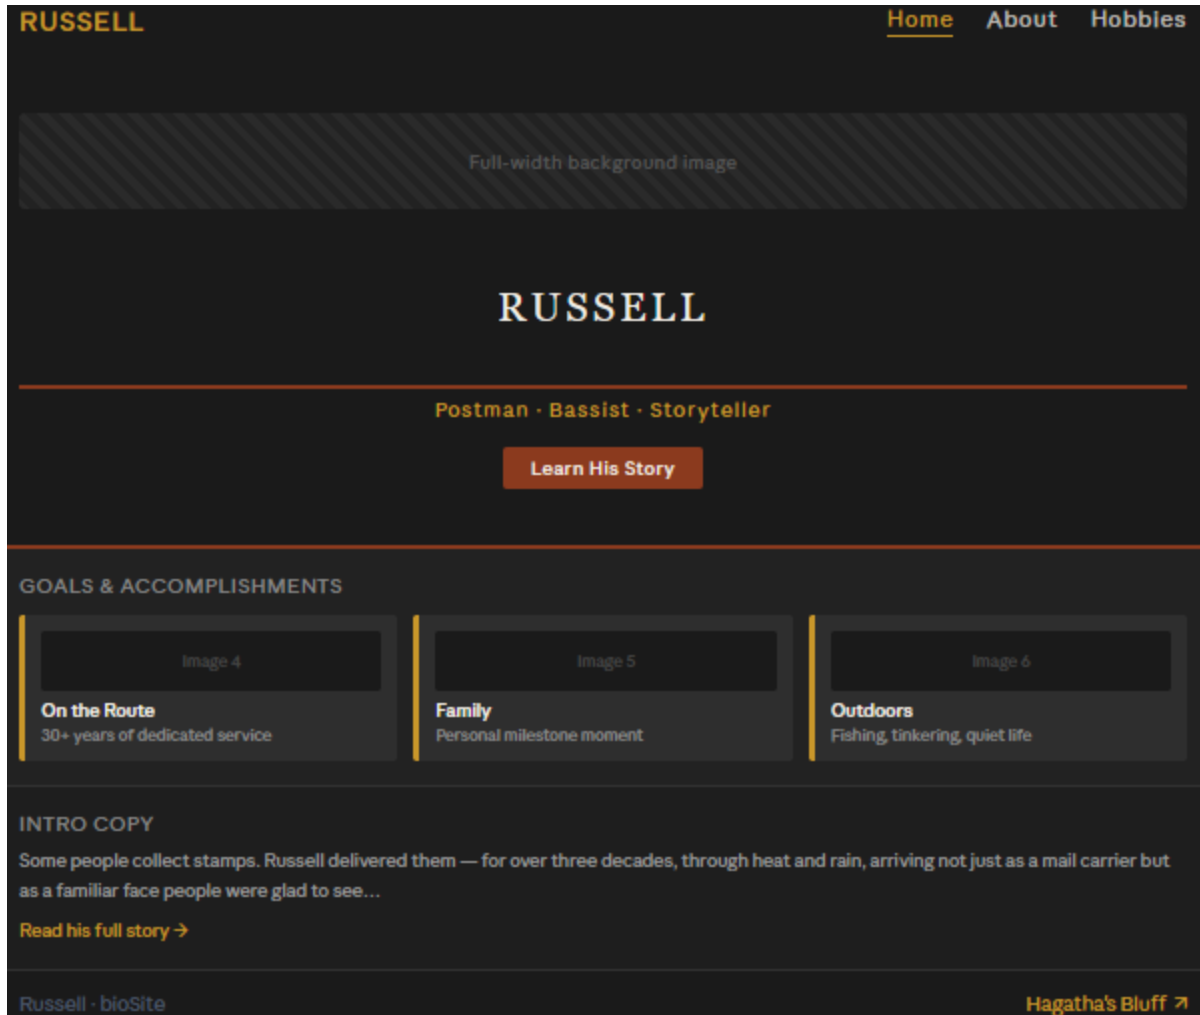

The bioSite for Russell consists of three pages: a Landing Page, an About Page, and a Hobbies Page. The wireframes below represent low-fidelity structural layouts. All pages share a fixed navigation bar and a footer.

Site Map

- Landing Page (index.html) slideshow Hero banner, highlights, intro text
- About Page (about.html) Portrait, full bio, timeline
- Hobbies Page (hobbies.html) Band, bass guitar, music passion
- Modular nav bar drop down experience.

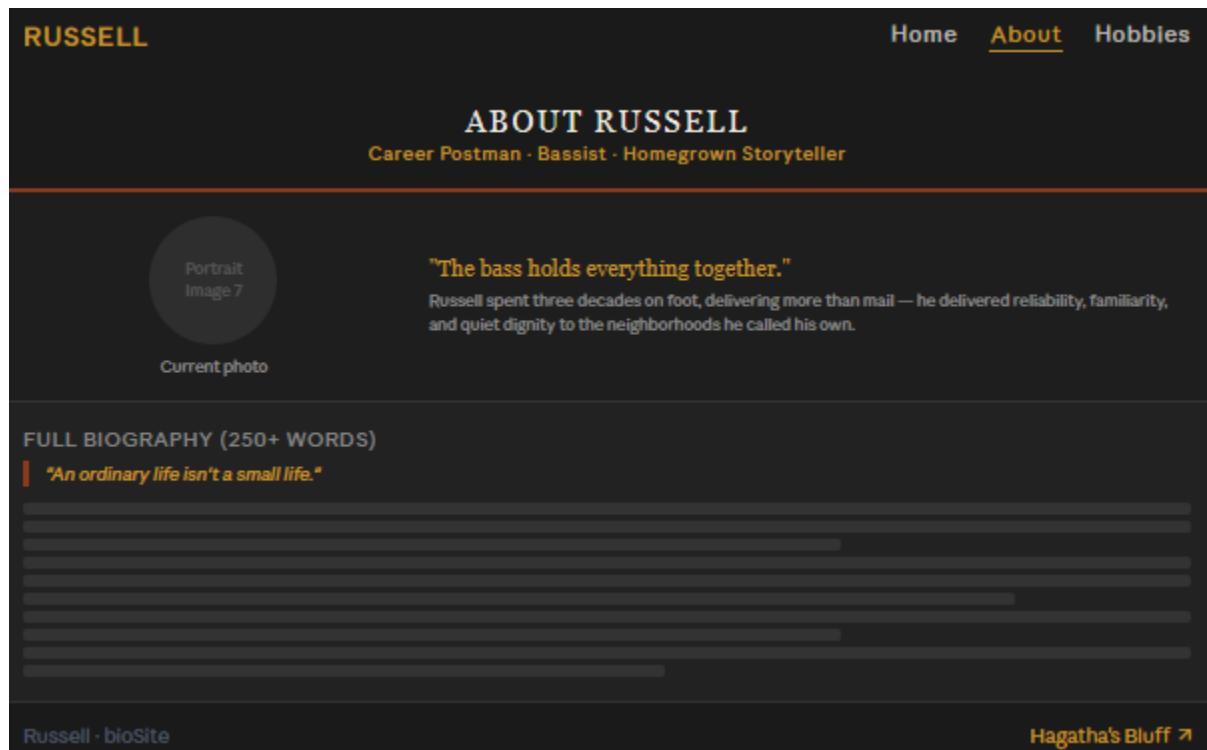

Page 1: Landing Page Wireframe

[Wireframe: Landing Page]

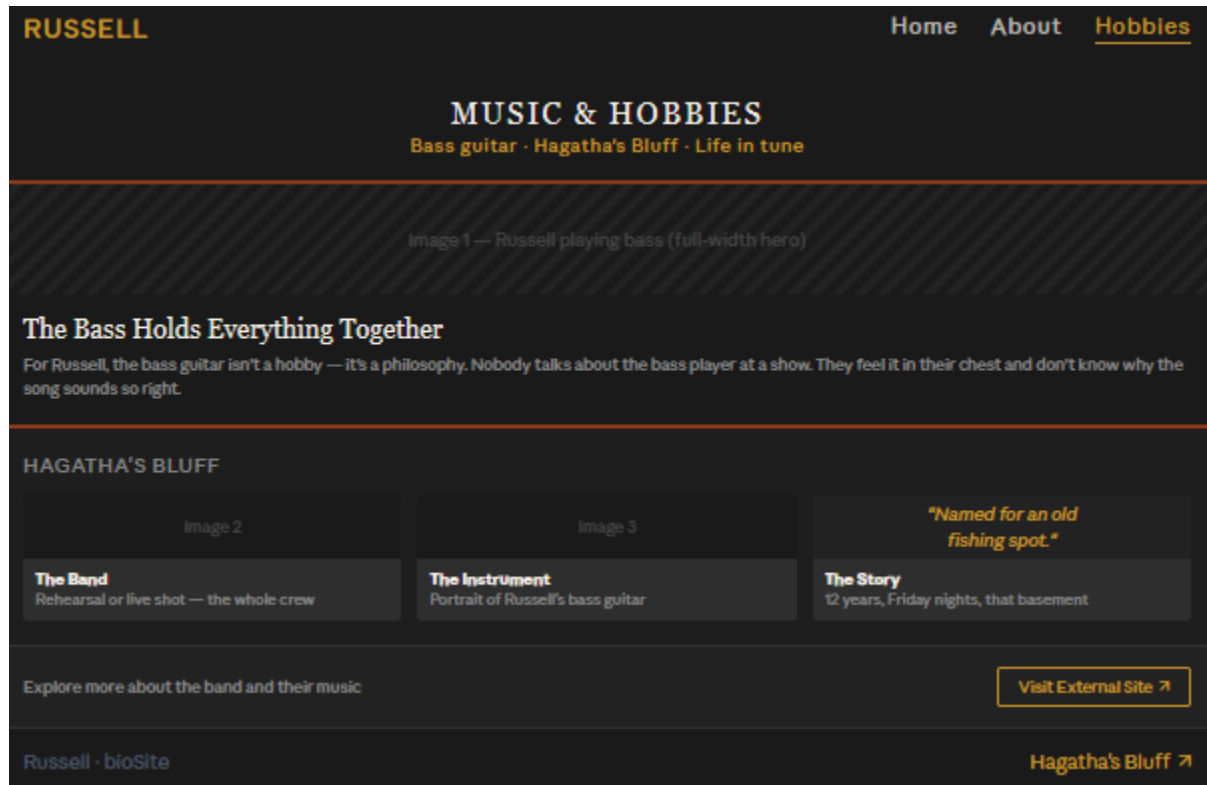

Page 2: About Page Wireframe

[Wireframe: About Page]

Page 3: Hobbies Page Wireframe

[Wireframe: Hobbies Page]

4. Subject Interview

The following interview was conducted with Russell as part of the bioSite research phase. Questions were designed to draw out personal history, professional identity, and creative passions. Responses are recorded as closely to Russell's own voice as possible.

Q1: You spent your career as a mail carrier. How did you end up working for the postal service, and what kept you there?

Honestly, I needed steady work and benefits I had a family to think about. But once I got out on a route, I realized I genuinely liked it. You're outside, you're moving, and you get to know people. Regulars would wait on the porch just to say hello. I delivered mail to some folks for twenty years. That's a relationship.

Q2: Were there moments on the route that really stuck with you over the years?

Plenty. You see everything in that job, celebrations, heartbreak, hard times. I once delivered a check to a woman who I knew had been struggling for months. She cried right there on her front steps. That stayed with me. It's easy to forget you're carrying more than envelopes sometimes.

Q3: When did music first come into your life?

Young. My dad played guitar nothing fancy, just around the house on weekends. But there was something about the bass that grabbed me differently when I heard it. You feel it more than you hear it. I saved up and bought my first bass in my early twenties and never really stopped.

Q4: What is it about the bass guitar specifically that draws you to it?

The bass holds everything together. Nobody talks about the bass player at a show they feel it in their chest and don't even know why the song sounds so good. There's a humility to it. I'm not up front showing off. I'm doing the work underneath so everybody else can shine.

Q5: Tell us about Hagatha's Bluff. How did the band form and what does it mean to you?

We've been together a while now, give or take some lineup changes. A buddy of mine knew a drummer, and we just started getting together in his garage on weekends. We named the band after an old fishing spot we used to go to Hagatha's Bluff. It kind of became our identity. We play originals and covers classic rock, some blues, a little Americana. It's where I get to just be a musician and nothing else.

Q6: What does a typical rehearsal look like for Hagatha's Bluff?

We get together most Friday nights in the drummer's basement. Someone brings snacks, someone brings opinions. We'll run through the set, argue about a tempo or a key change, and then usually end up just jamming on something nobody planned. Those unplanned moments are the best ones.

Q7: How has music shaped who you are as a person?

Music teaches you patience and listening two things that help you everywhere in life. You can't play in a band without learning to listen to what everybody else is doing. You stop thinking about yourself so much. I think that made me a better father, better at my job too, honestly.

Q8: Outside of music, what are some things you enjoy or care about deeply?

I love being outdoors fishing is a big one. There's something peaceful about just sitting on the water with nowhere to be. I also enjoy tinkering with things. I've rebuilt a couple of engines over the years just for the satisfaction of putting something back together that was broken.

Q9: What is something about yourself that people might be surprised to learn?

People always assume a career postman or a bass player is a pretty simple, quiet type. But I always read a lot. History, philosophy, biographies. I've got bookshelves my wife says are a fire hazard. [laughs] I like understanding why things are the way they are.

Q10: What do you hope people take away from your story or from the music you make?

That an ordinary life isn't a small life. I didn't do anything famous. I carried the mail, raised a family, played bass in a local band. But I loved it. All of it. I hope people hear that not just in the music, but in how I lived. Show up, do the work, care about the people around you. That's the whole thing.

Q11: Is there a song or musician that sums up your philosophy?

James Jamerson the Motown session bassist. Most people have never heard his name but they've heard every note he ever played. He was the engine under all those legendary records. Nobody saw him, but without him it all falls apart. I think about that a lot.

Q12: What advice would you give to someone who wants to play bass?

Listen first. Too many people want to play before they know how to listen. Put on a record, close your eyes, and just follow the bass line. Lock in with it. Once you can hear it, really hear it, everything else comes a lot easier.

5. Subject Biography

The following biography will appear on the About page of the bioSite. It is written in third-person and draws on the research and interview conducted above.

Russell: Postman, Bassist, Homegrown Storyteller

Some people collect stamps. Russell delivered them for over three decades, through heat and rain, up long driveways and across quiet suburban streets, arriving not just as a mail carrier but as a familiar face people were genuinely glad to see. His career with the United States Postal Service wasn't a placeholder or a means to an end. It was a calling, one defined less by mail and more by the steady, reliable presence he brought to the neighborhoods on his route every single day.

Born and raised in a household where music was always present a guitar propped in the corner, records spinning on Sundays Russell developed an early sensitivity to the language of sound. When he discovered the bass guitar in his early twenties, something clicked into place. While others were drawn to the spotlight, Russell heard a different invitation: to be the foundation, the anchor, the pulse underneath it all. He saved up, bought his first bass, and never looked back.

For the last twelve years, Russell has been the backbone of Hagatha's Bluff, a local band that plays original music alongside classic rock, blues, and Americana covers. Named for an old fishing spot the founding members used to frequent, the band is equal parts musical project and friendship a group of people who show up on Friday nights, work through the rough patches, and sometimes stumble onto something extraordinary in an unplanned jam. Russell doesn't seek the stage for personal glory. He seeks it because the music demands it, and because a bass line without someone to play it is just silence waiting to happen.

Away from music and the mail route, Russell is a quiet reader history, philosophy, biography a man who likes to understand the world beneath the surface of things. He fishes when time allows, not for the catch but for the stillness. He rebuilds engines for the satisfaction of making something whole again. He is, in the most honest sense of the phrase, a man who shows up: for his family, for his bandmates, for the strangers on his route who waited not for their mail but for him.

Russell's story does not belong to headlines or highlight reels. It belongs to the long game the decades of small, deliberate choices that add up to a life that is full, purposeful, and genuinely his own. If you follow that bass line, you will find him there at the center of it, doing what he has always done: holding everything together.

6. Image Plan & Descriptions

IMPORTANT

I did not have time this week to source images as I want to go and take pictures with my dad doing these things, so I wrote out a roadmap so I can keep on track, I hope that this suffices I spent a lot of my time mocking up the wireframes. A lot of these details are subject to change throughout development, as I want to work on this project with my subject, understanding how they would like to be viewed I plan on this project being a way for my dad to showcase himself online for bands looking for an artist in the area.

Group A: Hobbies Page 3 Images (Music / Band)

Image 1 Russell Playing Bass

Page: Hobbies | Placement: Featured hero image at top of Hobbies page

Description: A close-up or mid-shot of Russell playing his bass guitar either in rehearsal or on stage. Ideally captures motion or concentration.

Narrative relevance: This image establishes Russell's identity as a musician before a word is read. The bass guitar is not a prop it is a character in his story. Showing him playing anchors the Hobbies page with immediate visual intent.

Image 2 Hagatha's Bluff Rehearsal or Performance

Page: Hobbies | Placement: Mid-page gallery, first of three cards

Description: A band shot ideally live or in the rehearsal space. Should show at least Russell and one other member, conveying the collaborative nature of the group.

Narrative relevance: Music for Russell isn't solitary, it's communal. This image represents the brotherhood of Hagatha's Bluff, the Friday-night commitment, and the joy of playing with people you trust.

Image 3 The Bass Guitar (Instrument Detail)

Page: Hobbies | Placement: Mid-page gallery, second of three cards

Description: A detail or portrait shot of Russell's bass guitar the instrument itself. Could be leaning against an amp, in its case, or held up for the camera.

Narrative relevance: An instrument tells its owner's story. Scratches, wear, stickers, finish they accumulate years of use. This image invites the visitor to see the object before they hear the music, creating curiosity.

Group B: Landing Page 3 Images (Goals / Accomplishments / Life)

Image 4 On the Mail Route

Page: Landing | Placement: Accomplishment card #1 in the 3-column highlights section

Description: Russell in his postal uniform ideally a candid shot on route, at a mailbox, or walking a sidewalk. Action preferred over posed.

Narrative relevance: Three decades of service is a genuine accomplishment. This image grounds the site in the most foundational chapter of Russell's working life and signals to the visitor: this is a man who kept his word, every day, for thirty-plus years.

Image 5 Family or Personal Milestone

Page: Landing | Placement: Accomplishment card #2

Description: A photo of Russell in a personal context a family gathering, a milestone moment, or a candid shot that reveals character rather than title.

Narrative relevance: Work and music tell part of the story. Family tells the rest. This image positions Russell not as a postman or a bassist but as a person someone whose accomplishments extend beyond the professional into the deeply personal.

Image 6 Outdoor / Fishing or Hobby Outside Music

Page: Landing | Placement: Accomplishment card #3

Description: Russell engaged in a secondary passion fishing, working on a vehicle, or outdoors in a natural setting. A quieter, more contemplative image.

Narrative relevance: This image rounds out the landing page portrait by showing Russell at rest not performing, not working, just being. It invites the visitor into the dimension of his life that isn't defined by title or output, and reinforces the idea that a good life is about more than what you do for a living.

Group C: About Page 1 Image (Portrait)

Image 7 Formal Portrait of Russell

Page: About | Placement: Above the 250-word biography, centered or left-aligned in a two-column layout

Description: A clear, current portrait photograph of Russell. Natural light preferred. Can be semi-candid the priority is that it is recognizable and dignified.

Narrative relevance: The About page asks the visitor to sit with Russell's story in depth. The portrait should be the visual handshake the moment you feel like you know who you're reading about. It creates intimacy and shifts the biography from third-person text into something more personal and direct.